The IP image is based on a jade teapot from the British Museum and is currently housed in the British Museum. The shape of the pot is smooth, gentle, and stretching, with a freehand transformation. The flowers are both like lotus flowers and Buddha's hands, auspicious and quiet. The lid of the pot is decorated with lotus leaf patterns and other lace. The entire work is dignified, steady, and full of spiritual energy, with a thin tire that can be seen through the opposite side. The carving is exquisite. In addition to its exquisite craftsmanship and decoration, it is one of the representative works of Ming Dynasty palace jade.
